British Industry Passes Burden to

London, July 13.—Seldom has any people received such a swift and vivid lesson in practical economics as the British government has given its nation by the notice in the house of commons on Wednesday that it was raising the price of coal six shillings per ton from next Wednesday.

The response has been immediate and specific and comes from almost every branch of industry in the kingdom. They explain just what gov-ment orders will cost their concerns and serve notice also that they must pass the cost on to the buyers and consumers.

Great export industries declare that the increase in the price of coal will handicap them in their competition with other countries and may mean in some instances a stoppage of their plants and an increase in unemployment.

The general public is told how much the higher price of coal will increase living expenses. The govern-

It apparently meant this to be an object lesson as to what would result from the prevalent agitation for higher wages and shorter working hours. It was to be trying to show how the government could borrow cold water on the campaign for the nationalization of industries by trying to show that government management does not mean—that wages can be increased and prices decreased indefinitely.

Labor has taken up the gauntlet, charging the government with wishing to kill the plan of nationalization and also declaring that the government is favoring capitalists and creating conditions by banning bookkeeping.

During the last stages of the war the government was running the railroads at a loss, according to a statement made before the house of

The government holds that the increase of six shillings in coal was necessary because of increased wages granted as a result of the cost of the commission headed by Sir Eric Geddes, minister for national service and reconstruction. This loss is now at the rate of 60,000,000 pounds a year. The deficit in the coal industry is estimated at 46,600,000 pounds.

part of the commission headed by John Sankey and the falling off production. The present position railways and mines is that there government control with private ownership. The question agitating the country, particularly politicians, is whether the government proposes to adopt demand of labor unions for nationalization.

SELECTION OF CAMP SITES QUESTIONED ON CAMPS BY COMMITTEE

Selection of Charlotte Instead of Fayetteville for Camp Site Was Mistake.

Washington, July 11.—Questioned by a house war investigating committee about the location of the army training camps in the south, Secretary Baker said he

Dr. Baker declared the camps were placed in the south rather than the north solely because better weather conditions obtained there. He added that no influence that he knew of was exerted to send the prisoners to the south.

Mr. Baker said: "Frankly, I made a mistake in directing that work be done on Camp Benning, Georgia. In March after the senate military committee, on a tie vote, failed to approve the project. The secretary claimed that before making the decision Senator Hoke Smith, of Georgia, had told him two absentee congressmen favored the camp."

former mistake submitted by Sir. The reason for this was his selection of the Charleston, N. C., camp in preference to a camp at Fayetteville. Report of an inadequate water supply at the latter place, which was later disproved, misled him to select Charlotte. Here the soil later proved inferior to that at Fayetteville for a camp establishment of large artillery.

TUESDAY, JULY 15.

"Almost every town one visits nowadays either has improved streets or else they are building streets. York has already begun work on her streets; so has King's Mountain, and Asheville has floated the bonds and will commence at an early date. Chester is dropping up the rear but our good streets are coming at an early date.

Improved streets are beneficial to the health of any town. They are cleaner and can be easily kept free from dust. A cleanly germ does not like a good, clean street.

We have heard a great deal about the good roads in and around Shelby, N. C. These are good roads but it is plainly evident that their days are numbered unless the people of that section make a change and that in the near future. The roads which we understand have been built three or four years, are already showing wear and apparently nothing has been done to maintain them. Just why people will build good roads and then leave them is something we are unable to understand. We hope Chester county will adopt some plan to keep her roads in good shape after they are built. There is no sensible reason for building $450,000 worth of good roads to waste in a few years time.

People usually get what they demand. When the people of Chester demand that the city employ a better policeman they will get one and when they do get one they will have better health and we might add fewer mosquitoes.

If Uncle Sam had a military camp in Chester wonder what he would do about the mosquitoes? Would he move or would he move the mosquitoes?

When you want a well dug you get a well-digger; when you are sick you get a doctor. Now what would you think you ought to get to look after hygienic matters?

Good health is the greatest asset man can have but you certainly would not think so just to look around.

If a rabid dog were to start across town a hundred shots would be fired but that he was killed. Mosquitoes kill more people than rabid dogs and we just let them sing right on. "In consistency—Oh well, what's the use?"

We wish to direct the attention of our farmer readers to an advertisement appearing in this issue of The News, signed by the Chester Chamber of Commerce, with references to "Farmers' Week" at Clemson College. This course, is highly recommended and any farmer who can do well to take advantage of the occasion. Mr. H. K. Sanders, the county agent, will be glad to explain the matter in detail to any one who has an idea of attending.

According to the official record of licenses issued by the State highway commission there were 8,959 more motor vehicles in South Carolina on June 30, 1919, than there were on March 31, 1918. This is an increase of 17.7 per cent in three months.

There are now in South Carolina 58,000 automobiles and motor trucks and 713 motorcycles.

ACCUSED MACON MAN DESTROYS OWN LIFE

L. G. Stripling, Former City Detective, Indicted for Murder, Shoots Self.

Macon, Ga., July 13.—L. G. Stripling, 38, one of six former detectives recently indicted for the murder of Phillip Lamar and Abraham Kimbrell, alleged robbers, shot and killed himself a few hours here this morning.

W. O. Swift, who was with Stripling when the shooting occurred and who is alleged to have fired one of the shots, was convicted of murder by a jury here on Friday and given a life term on the recommendation of the jury.

Stripling was on bail and was to come to trial at the November term of court. When he was released from jail on bail he told the jailer that he would never turn the key on him again. It developed at the coroner's inquest today.

Stripling was a member of a prominent middle Georgia family, married and the father of a 14-year-old boy.

Anne—He is a stranger in town.
Bob—Dancing, isn't he?
Anne—Nervest fellow I've ever seen.
Bob—I noticed he had his arm rather tightly about you.
Anne—I didn't mind that so much.
Bob—What then?
Anne—Do you know why he had me clutched that way?
Bob—Can't imagine.
Anne—Well, would you believe it, he hid me that way so I couldn't escape, and all the time we were dancing he was trying to sell me some life insurance.

NEVER was such right-handed-twisted smokejoy as you puff out of a jimmy pipe packed with Prince Albert! That's because P. A. has the quality!
You can't fool your taste apparatus any more than you can get five acres out of a family deck! So, when you hit Prince Albert, coming and going, and get up half an hour earlier just to start stoking your pipe or rolling cigarettes, you know you've got the big prize on the end of your line!
Prince Albert's quality alone puts it in a class of its own, but when you figure that P. A. is made by our exclusive patented process that cuts out bite and parch—well—you feel like getting a book of dictionaries to find enough words to express your happy days sentiments!

FERGUSON-GLADDER

(Written for The News.) A simple, yet pretty home wedding was celebrated at the home of Mr. and Mrs. S. H. Ferguson Wednesday afternoon, July the ninth, when their daughter, Miss Viola W. Ferguson, was united in matrimony to Mr. William Charles Gladden, who is a native of Chester.

The parlor was tastefully decorated in greenery and white roses. Opposite the door was a pretty bride and groom, the center of which was suspended a large white bell. Just at five o'clock Miss Sarah Stevenson entered the parlor and sang "Just Because I Love You" and "Calm as the Night" (Bohm). Miss Genevieve Stevenson played the accompaniment on the organ. Immediately after the song died away the notes of Lohengrin Bridal Chorus sounded forth.

The first of the bridal party to enter were Rev. J. J. Stevenson, uncle of the bride, with Rev. J. J. Ferguson, brother of the bride. They took their place at the back of the bower. The maid and groomsmen came next. Miss Mary Gladden with Mr. Steve Ferguson, Mr. H. H. Ferguson with Mr. John C. Gladden, and Miss Lottie Belle Ferguson with Mr. R. H. Gladden. The next to enter was the maid of honor, Miss Julie Ferguson. Following her were the groom and his best man, Mr. Lewis T. McCarty. Little Paul (Fried) Ferguson as ring bearer and May Lee Ferguson as flower girl then came in and immediately the bride entered on her father's arm.

During the ceremony "I Love You Truly" was played softly, and at the end of the ceremony the familiar wedding march of Mendelssohn was rendered by the organ.

The bride and groom were dressed in dainty georgette crepe dresses of pastel colors and carried shower bouquets of flowers. The bride looked very dainty in a simple dress of white georgette and satin, elaborately embroidered in pearls. Her hair was held in place by an orange blossom coronet, and her bouquet was of white carnations with a shower of white satin ribbon and small sprays of star jasmine.

The bridal party proceeded from the parlor to the living room to receive the congratulations of the guests. From there they entered the dining room, where refreshments were served. The color scheme in the dining room was pink and white. A white umbrella filled with pink roses and foliage was suspended from the center of the ceiling. A vine of pink roses extended from each corner of the table to the umbrellas. White and pink cream and bride's cake were served followed by white and pink mints.

As the guests left the dining room they registered in the bride's book, which was presided over by Miss Kathleen Cottingham.

At one end of the porch a lovely little booth was made of white and wisteria blossoms. From this booth Miss Maggie Gross and Carrie Belle Kee served delicious fruit punch to the guests.

Mr. Gladden is the second daughter of Mr. and Mrs. S. H. Ferguson. She graduated at Winthrop College several years ago and since that time has been a successful teacher in different parts of this state.

Mr. Gladden is a progressive farmer who owns a fine home. He is situated about four miles of Richburg, where he will take his bride after they return from their bridal trip to the beach.

The bride's traveling suit was of African brown tulle with accessories to match.

The friends of Mr. and Mrs. Gladden are glad to see the bride permanently in their midst and extend hearty congratulations and best wishes to them for a long and happy life.

TO CONFER ON LAW ENFORCEMENT

Solicitors, Magistrates, Foremen Grand Juries, Meet in Columbia Wednesday.

Hundreds of law officers of South Carolina, including sheriffs, magistrates, foremen of grand juries and solicitors, are to meet in Columbia Wednesday, to discuss the most important of crime conditions and law enforcement problems in South Carolina. The governor has sent a written notice to the solicitors for the purpose of holding a conference and sheriffs, asking them to attend this meeting and he is urging the magistrates, through the press, to attend.

The governor states that he could not send a letter to each magistrate because there are so many of them in the office in the state.

The provision law and his enforcement will be one of the main subjects before the gathering. The governor, in calling the meeting, stated that a number of complaints had come to him of the violation of the prohibition law in various sections of the state. The governor also called attention to the fact that the number of homicides was increasing and the jails filling up.

The Department of Agriculture says that beef prices are too high. But do we need to hire high-priced experts in order to discover that?

CHAMBER OF COMMERCE NOTES

The following will be of interest to our busy members. Mr. D. B. Elliott, Dairy Specialist, has spent the last three days of the week in the county with County Agent, H. K. Sanders, visiting the Gurney Breeders and Milk Shippers. Several farmers are contemplating building Siles this Fall and remodeling their old barns. Mr. W. J. Stringfellow has been in the Dairy Work for about two years and intends to enlarge his herd from fifteen to forty head in the near future.

Several residents of Rodman section have been shipping milk to Columbia each day under great difficulties, first trying to ship over S. A. L. to be transferred at Calhoun and carried thence by way of Southern to Columbia. This service was very unsatisfactory as connection was hard to make at Calhoun. The Chamber of Commerce took this shipping matter up with the General Passenger Agent trying to get Southern Train No. 81 to stop at Lewis for those shipments, but the arrangement could not be made. On Thursday, Mr. D. B. Elliott, Dairy Specialist, from Columbia, S. C., and County Agent, H. K. Sanders visited Rodman and found the milk shippers had succeeded in employing Mr. W. R. Ketchum to haul the cream in a truck from Rodman to Chester, to catch the fast train, and this has proven to be a success. About nine farmers are shipping milk and six or eight others have expressed their intention of shipping milk in the near future on this route.

The Red spider has broken out in several different sections in the County and efforts are being made to stamp it out. The Red spider can be detected by the cotton dying by dark red spots occurring on leaf and gradually spreading over entire leaf until dead. By looking on the under side of this spot you will find a tiny web with silken run. It is a small spider, smaller than a chicken mite.

Mr. Ed M. Kennedy, Secy., Work, Chester, and Fairfield, Gurney Association, has been elected Gurney Breeder to speak before the Association at this meeting. Considerable interest is being manifested in the vicinity of Armistead regarding time for Alfalfa this Fall. A cooperative shipment is being worked up and already two cars of time have been listed.

There are several tractors in Chester County says County Agent Sanders, and there will likely be more as soon as the people find that the tractor will last long enough to justify buying one. He states that he saw a 40 acre field of corn broken with a tractor plow last Fall on Mr. W. A. Dabbs' farm at Lowville and in the center of the field there was a strip broken with a two horse turn plow. At the present time this which was broken with the tractor is 12 to 14 inches higher than that which was broken with a two horse turn plow. All other conditions were equal, regarding seed, fertilizer and cultivation.

Farmers Week At Clemson

After several weeks and even months of planning the final revision of the Farmers' Week program, July 23-26 at Clemson College, has been made and everything is in readiness for some hundreds of farmers who will be present to enjoy and profit by the six days of intensive instruction which Dr. F. H. H. Calhoun, director of the agricultural department, and his co-workers have arranged.

The opening session will be on Monday afternoon, July 21, and will consist of an auto trip to make a general survey of the college grounds and farms, and of preliminary addresses, including a welcome by President W. M. Riggs, who has recently returned from France, and an address by Mr. B. Harris, commissioner of agriculture, commerce and industries.

A large advertisement in this issue by the Chester Chamber of Commerce explains the details and all interested are requested to read it.

Decision to indefinitely postpone the building of the Walmore Thread Mills at York, a new enterprise which was to be capitalized at $500,000, was made at a meeting of stockholders held Thursday. This action was the result of changed conditions since the movement to establish the mill was begun, chief of which were rapid advances in the price of building material and machinery. At the meeting deciding whether the promoters of this project may deem advisable to proceed with the enterprise.

WESTINGHOUSE Automatic Electric Ranges

TO PREPARE a meal at any hour, and put it into the range and forget about it until meal time! It seems an impossible dream, but thousands of women are doing this with Westinghouse Electric Ranges.

The time that used to be spent in watching the food, to prevent burning, is now devoted to useful work or to recreation.

The range is not an expense, but a saving: Not only does cooking become such an exact science that no food is spoiled, but meats actually shrink less in an electric oven than when cooked in the ordinary gas or coal range--you can buy less. With the present high cost of food this saving is a considerable item.

Electric cooking is clean, because there are no ashes or soot. It is sanitary, because every part of the Westinghouse ovens can be thoroughly cleansed.

UNCLE SAM SELLS OUT.

London, June 16.—The last of the billion dollars worth of stores purchased by the American army in England will have been disposed of on August 1 in the opinion of Maj. Gen. J. C. Biddle. The American army headquarters were closed June 15 and only a small contingent of the quartermaster's department remained to cooperate with the liquidation commission in adjusting a few remaining contracts and selling supplies. Consequently by August the army will cease to have a war interest in England.

"Immediately after the armistice was signed we began to cancel and adjust contracts, and in this week had such hearty cooperation from the British war office that the United States has been able to clear up its contracts very advantageously," said Gen. Biddle. "Only a few items remain to be adjusted."

"The last property on hand consisted largely of aviation, engineer, and ordnance stores. It was not deemed advisable to dispose of these 'quickly' and finally it was arranged that auction sales of all that was not disposed of privately should begin the latter part of June. There was demand for most of the material and our early inquiries indicated that good prices would be obtained and also that we would have little difficulty in getting rid of everything we had."

"I want to lay emphasis upon the hospitality shown by the English people towards the American soldiers here that I am going home. We have been entertained and looked after officially and unofficially. The special committee of the ministry of information which provided entertainment at camps and for men on leave vied with the American organizations in making life pleasant, and the real spirit of hospitality was emphasized by the great number of English families residing near American centers of activities who made strange American soldiers welcome in their homes."

Look at Kansas.

There was one point on the map of the United States last night when no celebration or wake occurred over the passing of booze. Kansas was home from the harvest field, hot and dusty and tired, jumped into a bathtub, ate a hearty supper and went to bed. It awoke this morning at daylight and went into the harvest field again without a headache or a "hang over."

Kansas celebrated the passing of John Barleycorn on the night of April 30, 1881. That was 38 years ago. "We'll be back in five years," the bootleggers and as they turned the lock on the door for the last time. "Kansas will get good and tired of its prochners and its temperance fasciators when it sees its business ruined and bankruptcy staring it in the face."

"Betcher life," muttered the last remaining customer as he staggered out into the night which promised no daylight for the morrow to those thirty souls who regarded prohibition as a great calamity. "We'll get so tired of 'em that we'll chase 'em into the river when we see business gone. To Halifax; we'll get tired enough of seeing farms going for the mortgage and not enough money left in the State to pay taxes."

But the bootlegger didn't go back in five years. If he did, he went to jail. In five years after the "last night" of whiskey in Kansas, the State was more firmly convinced than ever that prohibition was a sound, thing. The bootleggers didn't take the farm, and the State found, somewhere, enough money for the taxes.

Wives and able lawyers said it was unconstitutional, this thing of confiscating property and of interfering with personal liberty. But the courts had a discouraging way of disagreeing with the wives and able lawyers.

The bootlegger and his friend who had gone out into the night together, appealed to the legislature. They took the case into politics, having allied with the courts, and they attempted to force the resumption of the question in a vote of the people.

In every session of the State lawmakers for ten or 15 years the bootlegger and his friend were on hand to introduce a constitutional resolution mandating a return to the saloon and "good business." But no legislator was found with the courage even to introduce a constitutional resolution, let alone to make a fight for it.

In Wichita, Topeka, Leavenworth, Atchison and Fort Scott, the bootleggers, at various times, opened up a place behind screened windows. They divided their revenues with certain county attorneys and sheriffs in various places, and they appeared to make some progress toward "banging back." But Kansas stuck to "knitting and insisted on enforcing the law the people had adopted. The bootleggers moved from the room at the hotel to an upstairs somewhere on a side street. Their county attorneys were elected and the bar-keepers moved from the upstairs room on the side street to the first floor, let down by the creeks. Then, one night, the new sheriffs made a raid on the tigher lots and the bootleggers left the State the next day, forgoing the hands which the Missouri brewers had put up for them.

If there is a trick in the trade of selling whiskey, from the gilded bar to the bootlegger and the hole in the wall which Kansas has not had to meet in its fight during the last 38 years, it is because the whiskey sellers have not thought of it. But there has not been a day in all that time when Kansas had the slightest intention of giving up the fight or allowing the bootleggers to make good the threat to "come back." And today, Kansas farm mortgages are selling for more than government bonds and the State still has enough money to meet the taxes it pays not only the taxes, but it pays the grocer and the man at the
